CENTER CREEK STORY

W. Dowma, an early Center Creek school teacher, and some of his students who in extra school work at night. He gave them free instruction each evening of day in his room at the home of James Lindsay. Pictured here, front row, left are Jean Lindsay, Rose Richardson, Maggie Lindsay and Jennie Baxter. In back row are John Burt, Irene Hundley and Mr. Dowma.

Ella Cluff, J. E. Martin, Charles Wahlquist, Robert W. Dowma, Le Flitner, Allie Rice and A. M. Hansen.

In later years a sandstone school building of two rooms was built. As student population increased two more rooms were added to the building and a modern heating plant installed. An average of four teachers were employed in this building, which was used until consolidation of the schools when the pupils were taken by bus to Heber City.

Some of the later teachers in the community included LaVar Christensen, Mabel Jorgenson, Charles Madison, Rollo Mahoney, Nile Allmeline Sweat, Lizzie Fisher, Clyde Bramwell, Helen Taylor, P. G. Larson and Frank Farnsworth.

Center Creek today is a prosperous little country village with some families all living in good homes. Their lives are characterized by peace and friendliness to all who come into their midst.

Typical of the spirit of the people is an accident in the lives of the Lindsay family, which occurred before the turn of the century.

About a mile above the Lindsay home lived Rasmus Nielson Miller and his family. One day when the family was away, Mrs. Miller was killed in a brush fire and burned to death. In the ensuing months, Brother Miller did his best to care for the family, but soon exhausted the few resources he had.

Livingston Clegg Montgomery

LIVINGSTON CLEGG
MONTGOMERY

L. C. Montgomery was born October 3, 1888, in Heber City, Utah, son of Livingston and Amelia Ann Clegg Montgomery, Utah pioneers.

His early education was received in the Heber schools, completing his high school years after serving a mission for the LDS Church in the Northern States from 1909 to 1912. He attended Brigham Young University in Provo and was graduated from the University of Utah law school, coming to Heber City to practice law in 1916.

He married Edna Lodell, daughter of Joseph and Martha Lodell of Chicago, Illinois, in the Salt Lake Temple on February 3, 1921. They became the parents of two splendid sons, Robert L. Montgomery, a bank executive, and Edward L. Montgomery, a prominent attorney. There are five grandchildren.

Mr. Montgomery held many offices of trust. He was elected mayor of Heber City for one term and was a stalwart in the Democratic party in Utah. L. C., as he was called, was a fearless defender for the rights of the people of Wasatch County and served as county attorney for 22 years. He was president of the Utah Cattle and Horse Growers' Assn. for 17 years and in 1937 was named to a trade commission board by Gov. Henry H. Blood to investigate unfair trade practices. In 1941, L. C. was elected vice president of the American Livestock Assn. An outspoken positivist of the old school in the western livestock industry, Mr. Montgomery's influence was extensively felt in formulation of policies on grazing on the public domain. L. C. was a former member of the board of trustees of Utah State University and was a director of the Commercial Bank of Utah. He was an active member of the LDS Church all his life.

His wife Edna died February 3, 1951. He married Mrs. Eva Bonner Jensen on April 28, 1952, in the Mesa LDS Temple. Mr. Montgomery passed away suddenly in the evening of July 18, 1952, of a coronary embolism, at the age of 63 years.

Local Resident Proving New Drugs Effective Against Viruses

2-13-86

Dr. James A. North

Two Brigham Young University scientists have recently reported that a pair of experimental drugs used in combination are remarkably effective against a wide variety of viruses in cell culture.

Dr. James A. North and Dr. Byron K. Murray, both micro-biologists, reported in "Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy" that the compounds ribavirin and selenazofurin have a synergistic effect when used together. They were tested against viruses such as influenza, measles, mumps, and herpes.

One of the most exciting implications of these new findings say the scientists, is that the combination drug therapy is effective against both RNA and DNA viruses.

"DNA viruses replicate very differently than RNA viruses, so to find a drug that would act against both of them is unusual," said Murray. "We've tested extensively with three RNA and two DNA viruses, and the combination is effective across the board. It stops replication."

All their studies so far, both researchers stressed, have been done in cell culture. Testing in a variety of animals is the next step and other laboratories are carrying out that work.

If the animal tests continue to show positive results, Murray said, the drugs could prove to be as important a discovery as penicillin.

Dr. James A. North noted

virologist and researcher at Brigham Young University, is a resident of Heber and the son of Leslie and the late Arlene North of Heber.

North graduated in 1952 from Wasatch High School where he was active in athletics. He received a bachelor's degree in zoology from BYU in 1958 and did graduate work at the University of Tennessee before earning a master's degree in microbiology from BYU in 1960.

He did graduate work one year at the University of Montana before completing a doctorate in microbiology at the University of Utah in 1964. He studied for one year in a post-doctoral program at the University of Cincinnati with Dr. Albert Sabin who developed oral polio vaccine.

Since joining the BYU faculty in 1965, he taught microbiology and done research on antiviral and cancer drugs. He has written numerous papers concerning his research and presented papers at local, state and national scientific conferences.

He is married to Laural Holt, formerly of Enterprise, and they have four children. North serves on the high council of the Heber Utah Stake and earlier served a mission to Australia for the LDS Church.
